

British Press Awards 2009

Grosvenor House, London
31st March 2009

Arguably the most rigorously and openly judged journalism awards in the country, The British Press Awards have been celebrating the best of Fleet Street journalism for more than 30 years. With Channel 4 News anchor Jon Snow hosting the ceremony, Liberal Democrat deputy leader, Vince Cable, awarded the top award of Newspaper of the Year to The Times.

Sound and Vision successfully won the contract to technically produce the 2009 ceremony in London creating a unique, contemporary and striking stage set ensuring the continued success and bringing the Sound and Vision touch to the awards.

With a newspaper-themed set which incorporated our fantastic Stealth backdrop, we created an electrifying and vibrant ceremony - all show managed by our slick and expert team.

The fantastic lighting effects continued throughout the ceremony with dramatic colour changes to the set, lavish colour washes to the room, haze machines for a theatrical touch and pin-spot lighting to accentuate table centres.

Escala, the gorgeous electric string quartet opened and closed the show, setting pulses racing with a stylish, high-octane performance that was complimented by a stunning laser show from Sound and Vision.

Sound & Vision provided a full audio-visual production package including screen graphics, animation content, stage lighting, set, sound and live camera.

“Just to say a huge thank you to the team for such a professional job on the British Press Awards. What a success!”

“Look forward to working with you on future events”.
